This is a game by two guys just out of high school. It is our first game and it's about a girl named Steph. A bully from school is pushing her around and Steph has become scared and that's when she hits this little pipe thingy that sends her back to her real world. Her hero has to get her back to the real world. The pipes are a major part of this game so pay attention. Controls: Player 1: Keyboard (the layout of this game uses the US keyboard) Player 2: Gamepad We would like to thank our programmers, Manish and Raj, who did a lot of the programming that went into this game. This game is for educational purposes only. Category:Nintendo DS games Category:2009 video games Category:Video games developed in the United States Category:Video games with 2.5D graphics Category:Puzzle video gamesQ: How to get rid of Offset inside a JPanel I want to write a board game that's coded with Java and the dimensions are 600x600 I have a JPanel that's located in the the middle of the viewport, but everytime I try to position an object, it creates an offset inside the panel, making the object not within the viewport anymore. How can I get rid of this offset? A: See the JPanel#setLocation: Sets the location of this component using the supplied x and y coordinates. If the supplied coordinates are 0,0, then the component is centered in the location. The origin (0,0) is the top-left corner of the component. It does not participate in relative painting. So, to keep the component at the same position, you need to call `panel.setLocation(0,0)`; otherwise, move it in the coordinates supplied by the `JPanel#getLocation`

Q: Beginner question about Heat & Mass relation

Edit: deleted question because I was told that what I was asking did not belong here. Was that right?

Is there a good way to derive that the more energy in a system, the more heat has to be emitted by that system? My understanding of it is that if, for example, I have a system, it starts at rest and is then heated up, the heat flow to the system increases. Now, I have the energy E

Monster Camp is a music game developed by Adopta and published by Hatoful Boyfriend. The goal is simple - make music the monsters love to listen to! But with each instrument in the game, monsters have a unique variation. Playing the same note over and over simply won't sound fresh. That's why Monster Camp is more about creating your own unique sound than recreating a previously made track. With its intuitive interface, the game is also easy to learn, but requires many hours of hard work to master. It's a true labour of love. Features:- 2,071 monsters - each with their own attack-Musical style makes a difference - play harder notes, softer notes, slow, fast, short or long notes to make your monster stand out. Monster Camp is a music game for mobile devices, featuring intuitive controls and a fun art style. The song creation aspect of the game was inspired by a conversation between Developer, Osamu Higashikuni, and User, RaTarus. If you have any questions, comments or

===== To obtain "MUMBA IV: Egypt Jewels", in the Custom Games section, hit the Triangle icon (2 vertical bars) and select "Off the bottom". Click on "Loaded Games" and select "Egypt Jewels" (you can only select one game at a time). Game Info ----- "MUMBA IV: Egypt Jewels", Copyright (c) SEGA, Inc., is a simulator game that take you to ancient Egypt. One goal is to explore the Nile valley and collect jewels along the way. The game combines the fun of exciting single player action with great, large-scale multiplayer competition. Begin the game by hitting the "Go" button. You start in a friendly area with no chests. Treasure chests appear along the way so you can collect more jewels as you progress, and chests open when you step on their footprints. As you progress, enemies will appear and try to block your path. You should avoid enemies, fight them with your sword, or try to pick them up to find their power level. When this happens, they will turn and attack you, even when you're inside of chests. The game starts you off with an amulet. This is the best weapon you can get in the game. Using your magic abilities, you will find yourself in more and more battles. For the amulet, your goal is to collect 10 spheres. The spheres are needed to upgrade to other magic abilities. Your sword is your main defensive weapon. Your aim is to kill enemies and take their weapons, armor, and potions. You may also pick up healers when you need one. When you die, the game resets. There are five different continents in the game: The Playground, Shanghai, Latin America, Europe, and Ancient Egypt. Each continent has three levels, each level has five stages, and the stages are made up of rooms and rooms. Each stage has two points: one in the beginning and one in the end. You need to get the most treasure in each stage, and go through each stage without getting captured or killed. This is hard to do unless you have the amulet. Once you reach stage 5, you get a chest that will give you the amulet, if you can get it to the end. The first treasure in each stage is to get two jewels

-year lease for the far-spent years of the NBA season. At the moment, the entire NBA-Finals intrigue seems to be centered on two guys: LeBron James and Kevin Durant. Last year, Durant, with the Oklahoma City Thunder, forked over as much as a million-bucks to host the Western Conference Semifinal game in Oklahoma City on the resumption of the playoffs. KDT got a deal most Warriors fans and management (and LeBron's management, I strongly suspect) thought they were paying a premium for: West Coast games that matter. As for LeBron, he thought he was getting away for a one-team visit to celebrate another title with one of his four sons and enjoy New Orleans with thousands of relatives, friends, and former teammates. [Follow Ball Don't Lie on social media: Twitter | Instagram | Facebook | Tumblr] However, the most profitable team in the game last year did not get an invite. Which is, in a way, no disaster for two reasons. First, it's not like the Warriors got some sweet discount that might not have lined up anyway. The Warriors won the NBA Championship for the first time since 1975 the prior season, a gap since the 128-season title drought in 1995. During the regular season, Golden State won 67 games, throwing off some major numbers and boasting a defense as stout as the Red Sox's. Before the playoffs, it was regarded as a stellar team: The Splash Brothers (Klay Thompson and Stephen Curry) were the best two-man backcourt in the league, and Andre Iguodala was the most decorated of non-championship MVPs. All headliners. All team-first. The Warriors somehow lost their way during the playoffs. They couldn't overcome the slightest bump in the road in the Nets series — the Nets were off for the summer once the Finals started, and by the simplest, no-brainer math, should have simply quit after blowing a 3-0 series lead — and ended up falling back in the tune of their fans. [Follow Ball Don't Lie on social media: Twitter | Instagram | Facebook | Tumblr] Not only did the Warriors disappoint, but the Thunder, for whom Durant got a taste of January in the First Round, faced a tough run to the Conference Finals from the Raptors, who shut them down in five games. But the Cavs

Jagged Alliance is back – and it is all about the unique mix of turn based tactics, fierce battles, squad management and crazy mercenary personalities. It is 1988 on the Caribbean island group of San Hermanos. A corrupt leader has the islands in his grasp. yet a group of rebels fights for democratic values and freedom. However, once the head of the rebels is arrested, the insurgents quickly dissolve. Arriving on the island, the player’s mission is to help the rebellion before things take a turn for the worse. Take control of your own band of mercenaries, lead them into battle and manage your resources wisely. Fight back for freedom, sector by sector, turn by turn. Like the original Jagged Alliance series, Jagged Alliance Flashback gives you the choice to use your preferred tactics and build your squad around it – rush in with heavy armed troops or take the high road of distance shots and sniping. More features and content will be added on a regular basis, and together with your feedback and support we will shape this game to be the best Jagged Alliance game yet! Please feel free to give us your comments, your thoughts and your recommendations. We listen to every one of you.
