However, it's not just the gameplay that benefits from the introduction of HyperMotion. For the very first time in the series, players will be able to display their own animations and exaggerate the way they play the game. Check out these animations in the video below. Adam Ondra, Senior Director of FIFA Development said: "The fans already knew about how our players move, but with HyperMotion technology we've captured the true movement and reaction of our elite players. Even a sidekick's gait has been recreated on the ball, and the way they look as they run the next step. So when you pull up a match, it feels like they are really there on the pitch.

We've done our homework, and players will now be able to feel their opponents on the pitch with more realism than ever before." The team also went out of their way to ensure that no undue attention was given to the player animations. The Xbox One X project seemed to be more about creating a tech-demo and serving as a showcase for the power of Xbox One X, rather than giving preferential treatment to any one player on the roster. Adam Ondra seems to have achieved a win/win situation for him and his team: win new fans (for FIFA) and establish Xbox One X as a more formidable force against the Sony's PS4 Pro. Here are some more interesting tidbits on the development of the new version of FIFA: Save Your Files Feature This particular build of the game has an in-game save file feature which will enable you to resume your game, after performing a save or load operation. Features Partially Recreated on the Ball In the pre-release version of the game the animations, strikes and dribbling movements of the players were not available while playing the free kick, penalty or throw-in. But in the final build of the game, you will be able to watch the players make these moves. It is also interesting to note that the rolling fake throw-in (also known as a feint throw-in) was recreated on the ball. Not only the movement of the player was recreated but the small dummy he creates on the ball also. The Free-kick targeting area has also been recreated on the ball and the dummy as well. The player's lateral movement is also now more realistic and natural

Over 20 Million Players Worldwide The FIFA franchise is the most popular and biggest sports game franchise of all time. Over 20 million players worldwide have played FIFA since its introduction in 1992. That number has been growing since. As of 2014, the game has been played over 2.2 billion times across both platforms. The FIFA franchise continues to grow and maintain a steady level of profitability. Forbes magazine reported in May 2009 that the franchise was the highest-earning brand among video game franchises for the first time, as EA reported a net income of $68 million for the first quarter of fiscal year 2009. Appearances in other EA games Although the original game was only released on Nintendo 64 and Sega Saturn, it was in some form featured in later EA releases. The arcade version was featured in a Battle Arena and the home versions were featured in EA Sports' Fight Night, EA Sports' Fight Night Round 2, EA Sports' Fight Night Round 3, and EA Sports' Fight Night Champion. Development On November 13, 1989, it was revealed that EA was to publish the first two games in the Sports series. FIFA was originally developed for the Sega Genesis. In early 1994, EA partnered with Sega to develop the Sega Sega Genesis/Mega Drive port of the game, which features more realistic football graphics compared to the Genesis version. Star Wars tie-in The soundtrack of the game was used to a great extent as a sequel of the main theme of Star Wars and was sung by Christopher Ward. He was also heavily involved in the soundtrack of the game. Reception The original FUT was highly successful, with sales of 30 million. However, while the sequel has been widely successful, it has not achieved the same commercial success of its predecessor, with 10 million being predicted by 2006. The game was also positively received by critics, gaining a score of 8.3/10 on the review aggregation website Metacritic and a 97% score on GameRankings. The official Nintendo 64 version of FUT had sold 2.1 million units in November 1999, becoming the second best-selling N64 game at the time after Super Mario 64. References

FIFA is the official videogame and worldwide leader in sports entertainment. More than 200 million players in more than 200 countries enjoy the excitement of FIFA, a videogame that captures the authentic emotions, exhilarating action and explosive intensity of the world's greatest games, every week. EA SPORTS™ FIFA is in good company. In 2002, FIFA won over players with its unique gameplay, big-impact tackling and intuitive ball control. In 2004, FIFA 2006 took the gaming world by storm with complete control of the match, greater player intelligence, and a digital hero system that gives fans unprecedented control over their favorite stars. Its 2007 edition, FIFA 07, was voted Best Sports Game by Guinness World Records. FIFA was also the first videogame to sell more than one million copies in one month, July 2006. This August, EA SPORTS™ FIFA 22 is redefining gameplay by introducing a brand-new "Small-Sided Play" mode, a plethora of new features and improvements, and an even deeper approach to Career Mode. Also returning this year are the improved Player Impact Engine, Player Impact Area (PIA) and Player Comparison, which will bring players an even deeper appreciation for their favorite players. FIFA 22 introduces Real Player Motion Technology, which was developed in partnership with legendary "Motion Guru" Dr. James Russell. Players will feel the intense speed and fluidity of the game while enjoying the unmatched realism of AI control. The entire playing surface will react to the player's every touch, making it easier for fans to play and learn the game. FIFA simulation is at the heart of EA SPORTS FIFA 22. So whether you're enjoying the action on the pitch, the thrill of victory in Career Mode, or playing the game on the go with Be A Pro™, FIFA simulation is essential. FIFA Gameplay Shapes the Universe introduces a physics-based AI, allowing players to make choices that have a greater impact on the game's outcome. For the first time in FIFA history, you will be the captain of your favorite club. The Real Coach Experience offers coaches a deep understanding of how to motivate players while helping coaches improve team communication in career mode. Coaches will watch players and build a "Rainbow Path" that will identify exactly what traits a player has that help them thrive at their position. Powered by Soccer, FIFA has delivered unparalleled soccer gaming for nearly 25 years. Now, powered by Football,
